

The new issue of Bread & Roses is out!

The main topic of the 27th issue of Bread & Roses is «Women, Feminism, Theology». Next to texts by Maca Jogan, «How to Be a Human In a Special Way», Leonardo Kovačević, «Believing Means Being Engaged to Revolution - a Feminist Atheology by Dorothee Sölle, and two texts by Dorothee Sölle, there is also an interview with Croatian theologian Rebeka Anić «For a New Theological Anthropology». This part is accompanied by a standard list of books from Women's Infoteka related to the topic women and theology. This issue also presents a longer essay by Da"na Drndić «Feminist Handwriting or Political Parable: Lillian Hellman». Besides always interesting accounts and reviews, there are also our standard sections: Who are they? What are they doing?, which presents the work of women's group PRST, then there are News and Calendar, with up-to-date information about the events that have occurred and those that are already about to happen.
